LEAD FOUND ON HILL TOP IN SO. S. F.

INDICATIONS ARE THAT ORE DUG FROM HILL ABOVE HIGH SCHOOL IS OUTCROPPING OF RICH BODY; COPPER DISCOVERED NEAR BY.

What gives indications of being a rich strike of galena or silver-lead ore has been made in the outskirts of South San Francisco, and this city may be on the verge of a mining boom. First assays have shown that the ore is of a high grade, but later reports on samples of the ore now in the hands of leading engineers and mining men are expected within a few days. It is believed the silver and lead uncovered at the very grass roots is but the outcropping of a large deposit.

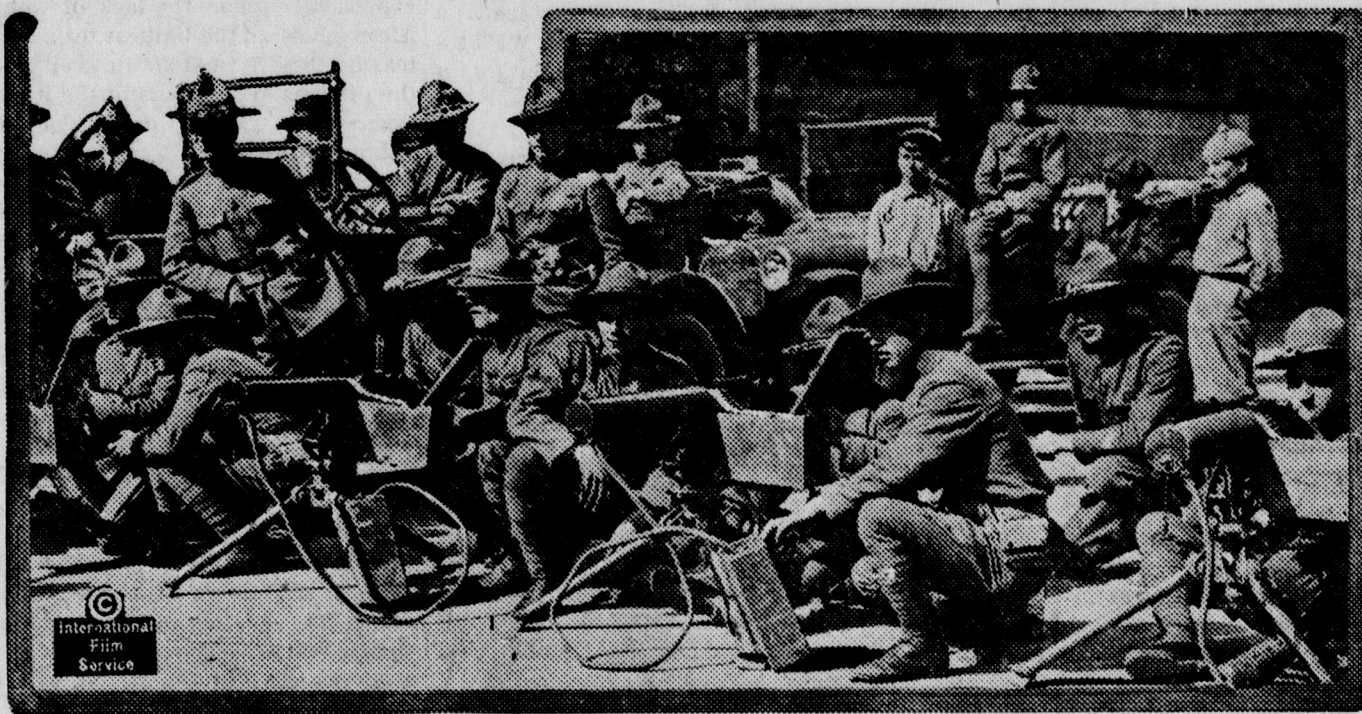

The developments of the next few days may have tremendous bearing on the future of South San Francisco. It is confidently believed by those who have seen samples of the silver-lead ore discovered on the hill above the South San Francisco high school by T. V. Barton of this city that they are but the outcroppings of a rich body of metal hidden in the heart of the hill. At present about a score of shallow prospect cuts have been made across the brow of the hill and traces of the ore have been found in every cut, indicating that there is a considerable body of it available. None of these cuts are more than six or eight feet deep and no actual development work has been done, later reports of assayists and engineers being awaited. The land on which the ore appears is the property of the South San Francisco Land and Improvement Company, and should these reports be favorable practically unlimited capital will be available for development work.

The ore was discovered last spring by Mr. Barton, who was at that time employed in the shipyards. Mr. Barton, who has had a great deal of experience with ores and in prospecting, saw the outcropping of rock at the point of the hill from a distance, and its formation interested him. Breaking off several pieces, his experienced eyes quickly noted the galena. A peculiar feature of the case is that several geologists and mineralogists have inspected this very spot and the surrounding territory. The rock itself where Barton made his discovery is believed to have been blown to the surface at some time by the accumulation of gas below. On this theory experts declare that somewhere below there may be a deposit of great richness.

An important factor in the situation is the nearness of the ore to a market in San Francisco and its situation within a half mile of the water front and a quarter mile of the main line of the Southern Pacific railroad, thus being adjacent to unexcelled shipping facilities.

Another discovery of ore has been made by Mr. Barton within the last few days that may be as important as his first one. About two miles north of the galena prospect Barton uncovered a deposit of copper and silver, with copper predominating, that gives excellent indications. In the immediate vicinity of this find is an old prospect shaft that was dug many years ago on the strength of

FEDERAL TROOPS STOP RIOTING AT GARY

Rioting by the steel strikers at Gary, Ind., was speedily stopped by the federal troops under the command of General Wood. Some of them are here seen with machine guns in one of the principal streets of the town.

THIEVES ENTER M'GRATH'S SALOON

Third Saloon Robbery Within Month Takes Place Wednesday Night; Small Loot Secured.

For the third time within a month thieves entered a saloon in South San Francisco Wednesday night and escaped with their booty. This time it was McGrath's saloon at the corner of San Bruno road and Grand avenue that was entered, the "haul" consisting of 35 cents in change, two watches, and a number of articles of jewelry. The money was taken from the cash register, the jewelry being fastened to a punchboard back of the bar. Every article on the board was cleaned off.

The thieves operated in a way to show themselves expert cracksmen, every outside door being found locked the following morning when the theft was discovered and every window being in its place and securely fastened, apparently just as it had been left the evening before. There was not a scratch on door or window to indicate how entrance had been gained.

The other saloon robberies here were at the Walter saloon across the street from McGrath's place. Walters' saloon was entered the nights of October 19th and November 2d. In these robberies, also, only a few articles from a punchboard and a small amount of money were taken. Another attempt to enter Walters' place was made just after the first visit, but on this occasion the midnight visitors did not get in, being, apparently, frightened away. There are indications that different thieves operated in the Walters and McGrath robberies, as in the first raid the door was broken in and the second a panel of the door was cut out.

..... the same copper indication. At this time work was abandoned because of the apparent disappearance of the vein. Barton believes he has rediscovered this vein, and declares his find seems to be about two feet in width and at least 400 feet in length. An assay which he has had made shows a valuation on the ore of approximately $20 a ton, the minerals being copper and silver with a trace of gold. Further and more exhaustive work will be done within a few days and if present indications are substantiated a company will be formed for developing the mine, Mr. Barton and his associates having already secured an option on the ground.

VISITING THE MORAN CO. PLANT

ENTERPRISE MAN SEES PACKING OF MEAT IN GREAT CONCRETE BUILDING; SANITATION AND MODERN EQUIPMENT KEYNOTES

LITTLE JOURNEYS THROUGH THE INDUSTRIAL PLANTS OF SOUTH SAN FRANCISCO, THE HOME OF MANUFACTURING INTERESTS.

One year ago in October Moran & Co. opened in this city their fine new packing plant of reinforced concrete at a cost of $700,000. It was the original plan to use the plant for the packing of pork only, but it was later found expedient to handle beef also, and thousands of head of beef cattle have been slaughtered at the plant during the first year as well as thousands more of hogs. It is expected that ultimately sheep and mutton products will be handled also, according to M. McArthur, assistant superintendent. When running full capacity the plant employs between 300 and 350 persons and has a monthly payroll of over $30,000.

It is to Superintendent O. E. Mills and his assistant, Mr. McArthur, that The Enterprise is indebted for the information set forth in this article and for courtesies shown The Enterprise representative when he visited the plant this week.

In the "Hog Hotel"

When the Moran plant was built no expense was spared to embody in it the latest ideas in efficiency-promoting devices and labor-saving equipment. One notes this in the first step taken in following the livestock from the pens to the plant. There are hog pens with a capacity of 3000 head of hogs, so arranged that all the ground space used is that necessary for four pens. The other pens are built up into a building five stories high with similar pens, each with a capacity of 150 hogs, on every floor. The hogs, unloaded from cars on the tracks below, climb to the different pens on a spiral incline. The "killing floor" opens from the last story. Up this winding incline the cattle on the way to be slaughtered also clamber from the corrals below. Every pen in the entire "hog hotel" is floored with

PEOPLE OF COUNTY HONOR SERVICE MEN

County Welcome Home Day Brilliant Success From Start to Finish; Large Crowds Are Present.

Under a sky of brilliant blue with flags and bunting flaunting, all San Mateo county on Tuesday honored the men who went forth to fight the Hun in the great war. The holiday spirit was abroad, yet the brave souls who did not return from the bloody battlefields were not forgotten. There was honor and a glad welcome home for the men who returned, with sorrow for those who made the greatest sacrifice. The whole occasion was a brilliant success, and neither those who rejoiced in their loved ones' return or those who sorrowed over martyred dead have reason to remember the day with aught but pleasure. People were in attendance from all parts of the county, and from the start of the parade in the morning to the close of the ball at night there was no hitch in the successful carrying out of the scheduled program.

The big parade started at 10 o'clock and was headed by the Third Artillery Band from Fort Scott. Notable features of the procession were autos with the county supervisors, San Mateo trustees, ladies of the San Mateo county Council of Defense, San Mateo Woman's Club, members of the G. A. R., floats and drum corps from Colma, San Mateo high school cadets and float, fraternal floats, Miss Louise McGinn in the character of Joan of Arc, marching bodies of school children, auto units of the Red Cross and its auxiliaries, marching men in uniform and Boy Scouts.

At 11 o'clock a demonstration in memory of the signing of the armistice took place.

The barbecue at noon for the former service men was well attended, as were the exercises on the high school grounds in the afternoon.

The street dance in the evening drew a great many people and ended a "Welcome Home" celebration that left little to be desired.

PANAMA-PACIFIC LODGE TO GIVE GRAND BALL

The Panama-Pacific lodge is planning a grand ball at Fraternal Hall in this city Thanksgiving eve, November 26th. During the evening a bazaar will be held in the basement of the hall while dancing goes on above. Arrangements have been made to accommodate a large gathering.

MURDERERS TO APPEAR IN SO. S. F.

SLAYERS OF M. J. NEEDHAM WILL BE BROUGHT TO THIS CITY FOR PRELIMINARY HEARING; ADMIT CRIME WHEN ARRESTED.

Carl and Fred Cole, twin brothers, 19 years of age, and James Helm Jr., a young man several years older, confessed murderers of M. J. Needham, the chauffeur whose body was discovered hidden in the bushes near Baden October 31st, will be given their preliminary hearing in this city in the court of Justice of the Peace W. J. Smith. Mrs. Needham, widow of the murdered man, swore to complaints against the trio here last Saturday. Sheriff Sheehan of this county and Lieutenant Goff of the San Francisco police force have secured extradition papers and have left for Ogden, Utah. They are expected back with the three young desperadoes Thursday or Friday, and on their arrival the time for the hearing will be set.

The boys on being arrested admitted their guilt with little hesitation and apparently with little remorse. They told of having carefully planned the theft of the machine in San Francisco, having determined to drive to Utah to spend the winter hunting and trapping. They told of hiring Needham to drive out into the country and of striking him on the head with a hammer, then of binding and gagging him and of concealing his body, not knowing he was dead.

Needham's car, which the three were driving, was traced to Kelton, Utah, where they sold it for $125. The three were then trailed to Ogden and arrested. When taken all three were heavily armed.

Later: The three boy murderers of M. J. Needham reached San Francisco in charge of Sheriff Sheehan and Lieutenant Charles Goff Thursday night and were taken to Redwood City this morning. The boys now give the names of Gordon Tescher, Lawrence McCarthy and John M. Helm. Tescher and McCarthy are 19 years of age, Helm being but 18.

The trio declared on their arrival in San Francisco that Needham was not dead when they left him and that he must have strangled later from the lodging of the gag in his throat.

WESTERN MEAT STOCK WIN MANY PREMIUMS

The Western Meat was very successful at the stock show held recently in San Francisco, the livestock the company entered capturing a lion's share of the prizes in sight.

The company's stock was all entered in carload lots and the following prizes were taken:

Steers—First and grand champion-ship.
Poland China hogs—First premium.
Duroc hogs—Third premium.
Sheep—Grand championship.
Lambs—First premium.

While naturally quite elated at the showing their livestock made, the officials of the company state that the winning of the prizes was a secondary consideration in their exhibiting at the show, the main object being the showing what could be done in the way of raising blooded stock. Mr. Washburn, president of the company, is an enthusiast in the matter of better cattle, hogs, and sheep for the farmer.

VISITING MORAN PLANT.

concrete, making the washing of all floors possible, with the result of scrupulous cleanliness. Up the side of the structure runs a large drain pipe that connects every pen with a sewer that carries the washings out into the bay.

The Killing Room

The hogs about to be converted into food for human consumption come from the pen to the killing room hanging from an overhead trolley by the hind legs. Having received the fatal blow and knife thrust, the carcass is carried through a washing vat into the scalding tank, all tanks and vats being constructed of cement. After being scalded the body goes into the "dehairer," which is a series of U-shaped iron ribs some five inches apart with a number of paddle-like affairs working up through the spaces between, these spaces allowing the loose hair to drop to the floor below. Piggy is rolled over and over, the paddles rubbing and scrubbing every vestige of bristles from his body.

The room where the cattle are slaughtered is close by. In these two killing rooms one notices something that is found all over the plant. All corners at the juncture of the floor and walls are rounding, making perfect cleanliness possible. Another thing one quickly notes is that practically all conveying is done on overhead trolleys or by chutes. This greatly expedites the work, doing away with hand carrying, trucking, etc.

A third thing that strikes one's notice quickly is the great abundance of windows over the entire plant, making possible the best of lighting and ventilating conditions.

The "Chilling Rooms"

In the "chilling rooms," where the carcasses go after being slaughtered, again modern ideas have been worked out. Instead of the frigid water being piped through the rooms it is in an open tank above. Under pressure it is forced from pipes in spray against a canvas cover. An even, easily controlled temperature results.

There are four of the chilling rooms, each twenty by eighty feet, where long rows of carcasses hang. There are also two "sharp freezing" rooms, or cold storage rooms proper, where a lower temperature is maintained.

In the Canning Room

Ingenious, labor-saving machinery everywhere! Coming from the chilling rooms past the elevator which is situated in the middle of the building and easily of access from both sides, one walks into a canning room. Here men and girls are cutting and canning sausage, already cooked and smoked. Here are two machines stuffing sausage into cans and tended by three persons each. One machine has a capacity of 20,000 cans in eight hours, the other of 25,000 cans.

Near by is the cooking room, where seven cookers constructed of light sheet metal and connected with steam pipes cook the sausage before canning. In an adjoining room certain kinds of sausage are cooked, then chilled in the same sheet iron compartment, the sausage conveyed on racks hanging from an overhead trolley track, being cooked by steam from pipes near the floor, after which the place is opened, the steam expelled, and the sausage chilled with a frigid spray from pipes at the top of the room.

The Smokehouses

The smokehouses at the Moran plant are the height of three stories of the big building. A fire of oak logs is kindled on the ground floor, and at each floor meat may be put into the smoke. There are six of these great smokehouses, four for hams, bacons etc., and two for sausages. Overhead tracks convey the hanging racks of meat to the smokehouse from the other rooms or back again quickly, without loss of time or motion.

Novel Machines

On the floor below and just beneath the killing room is seen how quickly and efficiently some parts of the newly killed carcasses are handled. Down through chutes come the heads and the viscera. A machine opens the skull for the removal of the brains. Another machine removes and cleans the tripe more quickly, more thoroughly than it could be done by hand. In another room below the chilling rooms other chutes bring down the cooled half carcasses, and working at a whizzing bandsaw, a man cuts them into sections, a sliding table moving the meat back and forth past the keen teeth. One man at this saw handles 70 beeves a day and, when running steadily, can "carve" 175 hogs an hour. Another saw splits pigs' feet into the neat halves you have noticed at delicatessen stores.

Lard and tallow are removed by hydraulic pressure after the fat is cooked in two big "pressure tanks" under a forty-pound head of steam.

In one room a "scale tank" receives the vegetable oil that goes into the making of cooking compounds, etc. This oil is stored in two tanks in the yard, each having a capacity of 208,000 gallons. In the scale tank the oil is carefully weighed before the mixing with other ingredients to insure a uniform product. From this tank the oil runs by gravity to the floor below, where it passes over chilled rollers insuring its "smoothness."

Other Departments

The "pickling cellar" at the Moran plant is a busy place. Some idea of its size may be gathered from the fact that 1,000,000 pounds of meat may be processed there at one time. Hams, bacon, picnic hams, corned beef, and other cured meats are its products.

The government inspectors always on duty at the plant have a well-fitted office of their own. It has dressing rooms and shower baths in connection; in fact, about all the comforts of home.

In different places in the plant are dressing rooms for the employees. There are three of these for the men and one for the women, all equipped with hot and cold showers. Besides these there are wash rooms in every department fitted with hot and cold water. In fact, all over the big plant one notices the utmost care toward cleanliness. The cement construction of the entire building lends itself easily to all sanitary measures.

The plant has its own box factory on the ground equipped with the latest machinery. This means a great saving, as the shipping and packing rooms use thousands of boxes monthly.

Another structure in the rear of the main building is fitted up as a modern machine, carpenter, and blacksmith shop. A score or so of men spend all

WILL ARGUE ON MOTION BEFORE JUSTICE OF PEACE

Arguments on a motion to quash action following a summons will be heard in Justice W. J. Smith's court Saturday morning. The action is the outgrowth of a summons and attachment, a Mr. Diritoni of San Francisco being the defendant, his attorneys making the motion to quash proceedings on technical points. The plaintiff, the Hawkins Real Estate Company of San Bruno and South San Francisco, is represented by Attorney J. J. Bullock.

GOVT OFFICER VISITS SALOONS IN THIS CITY

A federal revenue officer made a visit to South San Francisco Wednesday on the lookout for violators of government prohibition laws. The officer inspected a number of local saloons and, wherever his suspicions were aroused, took samples of the liquid refreshments being served and caused the places to be locked up until he could get an analysis of the samples. He returned Thursday and permitted most of the saloons to reopen their doors.

A word to the wise: ADVERTISE IN THE ENTERPRISE.

The power house is alongside the machine shop. Here three great boilers of 300 horsepower each and each fitted with automatic feeding attachments supply the plant with steam.

Beside the corrals stands a barn with a capacity of twenty-five carloads of hay for the cattle and horses. The corrals themselves are now being paved with cement at large expense and in the interest of sanitation.

Beside the main building is the fire-proof garage that houses the seven trucks used by the Moran Company.

Recently it was announced that the Moran Company and the Virden Packing Company of Sacramento had merged and that the combined concern would be capitalized at $5,000,000. The announcement stated also a number of extensions and improvements would follow at the big, already splendidly equipped local plant.

HIGH SCHOOL NOTES

The local football team showed up well against the heavy Santa Clara team last Friday, and was beaten only by superior weight.

Gardner and Murray, halfbacks, and Dart, fullback, for the local team gained many yards by line plunges and end runs.

The first two quarters were scoreless, but aided by a strong wind Santa Clara intercepted a forward pass and scored early in the third period and before the final whistle had piled up 15 points.

The local team has improved with each game, showing a fair knowledge of the game, but has been handicapped all season for lack of weight. Although much the lightest team in the league, they have stood up well under the plunges and attacks of the heavier teams and deserve credit for their fighting spirit.

The Science Club, organized and directed by Mrs. Browne, is doing some interesting work in the study of birds. Several stuffed varieties were furnished by Miss Diggles, which were much appreciated by the club. The club has secured a lecturer from the university and also a trip afield conducted by the University of California. Some very interesting and instructive programs are in store for the Science Club.

The student body will present for the public O. M. Carrington's operetta, "The Love Pirates of Hawaii." The exact date of the play will be announced later. The operetta will be given as an athletic benefit and the Boosters' Club has undertaken to pack the house for the occasion.

TWO PAY FINES FOR BREAKING GAME LAWS

Two violators of the state fish and game laws were brought to book in this city by Game Warden Jack Burke this week. One, Ednest Tambussi, was fined $25 for killing rabbits out of season, and had $10 of his fine remitted. The other, a Japanese named T. Takabarbi, paid a fine of $25 for having undersized abalones in his possession. The two were brought before Justice of the Peace W. J. Smith Wednesday afternoon.

CHAPTER IX.

The Man With One Finger.

Wallen walked quietly across the saloon to his own cabin. A strange, unnatural calm seemed to have fallen upon him with Gunga's words. Too late!

He could not in justice reproach himself. There had been only one chance and he had taken it—MacKnight's. Even if he had defied Laynton and his sordid crew hours earlier, the result would have been the same—it would have brought neither the land nor MacKnight's the sooner.

It was only that Ram Gulab Singh had come first.

He took his reserve supply of ammunition from its hiding place, stowed half the boxes away in his pocket, and with the balance of the cartridges in his hand, returned to the saloon and gave them to Gunga, motioning the other to remove the barricade.

"What are you going to do?" She had come out from her stateroom and was standing now, a straight, resolute little figure, with eyes that were very wide as they fixed on him.

The electric bulb in the saloon dimmed down and went out. The boom of the heavy gun came across the water again, and unconsciously for a tense instant Wallen waited, expectant of the shock if the shell should find its mark. It missed.

"I'm going on deck," he answered quietly. "They'll be too busy to notice me, and besides it's dark. Gunga will stay here and replace the barricade after I go out. We've got to know what's going on, Miss MacKay. The ship has been struck once, though not vitally, I think; but down here is no place to be caught in if another shot prove more successful. I will be back presently."

Without giving her a chance to reply he slipped through the door as Gunga opened it and out into the alleyway. It was black, empty, deserted, as he had expected.

He made his way up the companionway to the little lounging room and halted in the port doorway, looking out.

He could see nothing at first. It was very dark—not a light showed on the Monleigh. In that respect Laynton, taught no doubt by his experiences in the discreditable and varied trades he had boasted was the Monleigh's business, had been prompt to meet emergencies.

And then gradually, discernible only to a sailor's eye, like a dark blotch on the water, Wallen made out another steamer almost abeam. An instant later, as though in grim indorsement of his vision, from the blotch there leaped a great red flame, came the heavy, resonant roar of the gun's report, and overhead a shell whistled ominously by.

About a mile Wallen now placed the distance between the two vessels, though as to the size of the other he could form no estimate. But did it matter?

She was well armed at all events; and it was Ram Gulab Singh, once a government official, always a robber and a murderer—the man who had brought his mother to her death, his father to his death, and now it was his own turn!

But he knew neither excitement nor dismay. He was only conscious of something smoldering dully within him, and that was because Helen MacKay was here. He shook his head a little. Helen MacKay, of course, would never fall into Ram Gulab Singh's hands—alive.

On the bridge he could hear Laynton calling down the engine room tube, frantically imploring the engineer for speed; and then Laynton's voice was drowned out by a din from forward by the crew.

Wallen, hugging the shadows of the deckhouses, moved forward to a position under the bridge.

Mott was talking excitedly overhead. "She's coming up hand over hand, I tell you. If that fellow Wallen's story is straight after all—and I guess there ain't much doubt of it now—we haven't a hope if that chap out there gets aboard us, providing he don't sink us first. I say go full astern until we get away off her, and then take to the boats. We could give him the slip in the dark if we don't wait till he gets too near to see what we're about, and—"

Another voice cut in, Larsen's, as hurrying from aft he ran up the starboard ladder to the bridge.

"Help yourself, Mott," he invited sarcastically. "One boat's in splinters and the other's carried away; the deck aft is a wreck from that shell that struck us."

"Light that Morse lamp," ordered Laynton abruptly.

"Yes, and give him our position," sneered Mott.

"He's got it fast enough now," growled Laynton. "But we'll give him something else. You there, Larsen, light it, d'ye hear? And Morse, tell him that if it's that swine that's masquerading as Wallen he wants, we'll turn him over and—my God!"—with a rip and crash, staggering the ship, a shot tore the wireless house to matchwood.

"Quick!" yelled Laynton. "Tell him! Tell him. D'ye hear—tell him! He'll have us at the bottom in another five minutes!"

A strange, awed silence held for an instant following the shot; and now, over his head, Wallen could distinctly hear the clicking of the Morse set.

He strained his eyes seaward, watching for an answering signal, and after a moment it came—but not in Morse. It was the belching flare of the gun again, and again the rend and smash of the projectile as it tore into the Monleigh's hull.

There was no doubt about the range now, nor the tenor of Ram Gulab Singh's answer. It was as Gunga had said—the principle that dead men tell no tales. Ram Gulab Singh's tactics, from Ram Gulab Singh's standpoint, were faultless—that a ship might disappear off the face of the earth and be never heard of again was one thing, but that she or anyone on board her should return to report that she had been attacked in these waters, suspiciously those of Ram Gulab Singh, was quite another!

And then to Wallen came a space of time that he could not estimate, each moment recording some wild, unreal, bewildering, kaleidoscopic change in the scene around him. Again that terrific crash from a striking shell, and then a scream, unearthly, not human, from the very bowels of the ship—a tremor of the vessel from stem to stern, a groaning, screeching, wrenching of mangled machinery, a tottering thud as though the engines had collapsed upon their bedplates, a cloud of steam volleying skyward from the engine room hatch, and there was no more vibration—and the Monleigh lay a helpless thing, with only a sullen movement now from the momentum of a moment gone.

He drew back against the captain's room.

They were rushing down from the bridge, Mott and Larsen, to hurl themselves down the forward ladders from the boat deck to the flush foredeck below, shouting a confusion of orders to the crew as they ran.

Laynton, still on the bridge, was alternately bawling into the engine room tube and jamming the engine telegraph hysterically backward and forward. A weird, uncanny chorus of exultant shrieks, as of devils in unholy revel, came from across the water, and the sound was close now.

Wallen swept his hands across his eyes. He could make out the other vessel plainly now, gliding like a shadow down upon them—like a shadow, save when the gun's flame burst through the blackness, angry red.

And now aft behind him showed another flame. A curious sight! The steam pouring in immense volumes from the engine room hatch was streaked, as it swirled upward, with darts of yellow and bright red. There was fire below!

A Chinaman, one of the coal passers, naked to the waist, blackened, burned, yelling in torment, demented, appeared suddenly upon the deck, ran by him and leaped headlong from the rail overboard.

The bridge, useless now for navigation, was deserted. Laynton rushed down the ladder and into his room; the quartermaster, who had been at the wheel, came tumbling after the captain, and, like the mates, swung the forward ladder to the foredeck.

The Monleigh rolled with a sudden, heavy lurch. Wallen moved instantly back along the deck. Was she sinking? He halted at the lounging room door for a final glance.

The steam, roaring from the engine room hatch, was streaked now with deeper yellow, deeper red. And now there came the crackle of small arms from the crew forward—the answer a demoniacal mob-scream from close aboard, and, it seemed, a thousand tiny flashes as the fire was returned.

They were close alongside now—he heard the swish of the other's screw going astern to stop the way. They were preparing to board! Why? Why not stand off and sink the Monleigh?—the Monleigh was probably sinking now. Yes, he knew why. They were afraid that what Mott had suggested might be true—that he in the darkness might escape in a boat.

He laughed suddenly. What was it Gunga had said: "A fight, sahib, that I would to Allah I might see again before I die!" Well, Gunga had not prayed to Allah in vain. Gunga would have his fight. They were going to board. God, how they lined the decks and rails out there—they were in their hundreds!

It was light now, like the play of lightning with the volleying of the small-arms. Aye, Gunga would have his fight! He laughed again wildly—and then terror came.

It seemed to freeze his soul with horror, unnerving him, unmaning him for an instant. What of her! And then Wallen's face drew into set, rigid lines, and there came into his eyes a look that was not good to see—and he turned and dashed below.

"Open, Gunga, quick!" he shouted. And as the door swung back: "Miss MacKay—both of you—this way!"

They ran out to meet him, and he caught her suddenly, steadying her as there came a violent shock—and with the shock a hideous, louder outburst of yelling.

It was Ram Gulab Singh alongside! Half carrying her, half guiding her, Wallen, with Gunga behind, gained the top of the companionway, ran out onto the deck through the starboard door of the lounging room and, protected on this side by the deckhouses, rushed forward toward the bridge.

It was a last stand; that was all—ultimately the same as though they had remained below, except that here they could die fighting and not as rats in a trap.

He and Gunga could hold the bridge ladders until the Monleigh went down, or until at least every other part of the ship was in the hands of Ram Gulab Singh; and the charthouse would serve as a protection for her until—until—his brain went sick again with fear at thought of her—and it did not seem to be his voice that was shouting so reassuringly over the horrible babel around him.

"Up you go, Miss MacKay! That's it! Splendid! Now into the chart-

SAN MATEO VOTERS TURN DOWN BONDS

Proposition to Bond City $438,000 for Water System, Fire Engine and Fire Alarm Beaten.

By a decisive vote the people of San Mateo at the election held Monday killed the proposition to bond that city for $438,000 for the securing of a new water system, the installation of a box fire alarm system, and the purchase of a new fire engine. The propositions for a $400,000 water system and for a $24,000 fire alarm were voted down by a heavy majority. The purchase of the fire engine received a majority of the votes cast but did not get the necessary two-thirds and therefore died with the others. The municipal water and fire alarm projects did not carry a single precinct, the water proposition being snowed under nearly 2 to 1.

All three propositions have aroused much antagonism since first broached, but the decisiveness of their defeat came as a surprise.

EVAN. ST. JOHN'S CHURCH.

The bazaar given by the Ladies' Aid last Friday and Saturday proved a decided success, with a gratifying financial result. The crowds who thronged the hall on both evenings found three main booths well filled with a large variety of articles ranging from poultry to needlework. Especially attractive was the miniature grocery store with its fancy and staple eatables. The beautiful decorations of the booths and halls aided in giving to the whole the air of a gala occasion. The Ladies' Aid takes this opportunity for thanking all who made donations and patronized the bazaar.

Services next Sunday, 10:45 a. m., in English language. The pastor will use as his text John xi:5-6, "The Delays of Divine Love." All are cordially invited to attend. Sunday school, 9:30 a. m. Lesson, "Job's Trials."

YOUNG PEOPLE ORGANIZE.

A permanent organization was completed by the young people of San Bruno at the community church Friday evening. It was unanimously agreed that the Epworth League constitution should be adopted and a committee on by-laws appointed.

The following officers were elected: President, Wilbur Dixon; spiritual department, Mrs. Pearl Scharf; department world evangelism, Mrs. Alma Reynolds; department social service, Miss Florence Reid; recreation and culture, Miss Gladys Beckner; treasurer, Paul Forster; secretary, Herbert Beckner; pianist, Miss Claire Forster.

Details are being worked out for a competitive social program between two teams headed by Miss Sylvesta Augsburg and Miss Bella Beaton, respectively. The first gathering will be at the home of Miss Gladys Beckner this evening.

GOV'T TAKES OVER WORK OF Y. M. C. A.

On November 1st all civilian welfare organizations which had operated with the army during the war were relieved from active service in the army camps within the United States, this work being taken over directly by the War Department. This does not mean, however, that the Y. M. C. A. has stopped working for the soldiers. The present plan simply restores the army and navy department of the association to its pre-war position.

In making this change the Y. M. C. A. has transferred to the government without reimbursement all of its buildings erected in the camps for war work which are needed in the new army welfare department. A large percentage of its workers will be retained by the government to operate these buildings. The "Y" will also continue its service to all troops outside the continental limits of the United States until the army is in a position to undertake this responsibility.

The Y. M. C. A. will also continue its pre-war activities with the army and navy in its permanent buildings previously established in army posts or navy yards and in army and navy Y. M. C. A. buildings located in communities adjoining such stations.

SERVICE MEN SHOULD GET CERTIFICATES

The Bureau of War Risk Insurance wishes to emphasize the importance to service men of one of the provisions of the war risk insurance act upon the fulfillment of which may depend the validity of their claim to compensation under the act.

The war risk insurance act provides that "No compensation shall be payable for death or disability which does not occur prior to or within one year after discharge or resignation from the service, except that where, after a medical examination made pursuant to regulations, at the time of discharge or resignation from the service, or within such reasonable time thereafter, not exceeding one year, as may be allowed by regulations, a certificate has been obtained from the director to the effect that the injured person at the time of his discharge or resignation was suffering from injury likely to result in death or disability."

Many discharged men are not familiar with or are inclined to disregard this provision of law and are allowing their rights thereunder to lapse. Request for the certificate mentioned above should be made to the Chief Medical Advisor, Bureau of War Risk Insurance, Washington, D. C.

PLAN WHIST PARTY AND DANCE.

St. James' Society will hold a whist party and dance Saturday evening, November 15th, at Green's Hall, in aid of St. Bruno's Church. They will use both halls. Dancing will begin at 9:30, music to be furnished by the best union jazz band to be hired. The whist tournament in the lower hall will begin at 8:30. There will be twenty-five door and game prizes and home-made refreshments will be served.

A POISONOUS SNAKE.

It is not organized labor which threatens the future of this country. Neither is it the insatiable greed of capitalism.

Without organization, labor would be underpaid and underfed.

Without the capitalist, there would be no adequate avenues for the employment of labor. Both must survive. The menace with which we must cope is the alien parasite who has fastened himself on organized labor and is daily eating out the heart of the great American republic. These radicals from other lands are in a majority of cases not even citizens of our country. They are not loyal to our institutions nor to the true interests of the organizations to which they have attached themselves. They are alien agitators and destroyers—nothing more. They preach their pernicious doctrines and prey upon the susceptibilities of others with the sole idea of creating discord and disruption for their own individual advantage. They would displace the intelligent leadership of labor organizations and usurp the seat of authority for themselves. And they are succeeding in these nefarious undertakings to an alarming degree.

Violence is their only effective weapon, and this they employ to the limit of their possibilities in their campaign of brutality and intimidation. They are shrewd enough, however, to see that the responsibility for their devilishness is laid at the door of organized labor, and by this means escape the individual punishment which is their just due.

The American people have been bullyragged by these aliens until patience is no longer a virtue. The time is at hand for the government, the law-abiding element of organized labor and the public to kick these malcontents out of the country or place them where they can no longer agitate and destroy.

The poisonous snake is a source of constant danger and should be promptly crushed. The alien parasite who is sucking the blood of honest labor and preaching sedition among our citizens is a national peril and should be exterminated.

In the meantime, while all the world knows that America is in a chaotic condition, not all of the world believes that America has the brains, the will and the determination to bring sanity out of bedlam.

We, however, have confidence that such will be the final outcome of the present era of brimstone and brutality. We believe the government at Washington, and the congress of chosen representatives of the people, will arise to the patriotic heights necessary to restore order and fairness and justice throughout this land of a self-governed people. We believe that the great mass of the American people will give to the government and to congress that loyal and unswerving support which is necessary in this hour of rational travail. We believe that every true American will exert his utmost to restore our country to that condition of tranquility which prevailed before this wave of agitation and unrest and profiteering engulfed us.

Regardless of the present distressing conditions, we have confidence in America and American institutions.

The affair at Centralia, Wash., on Armistice Day when I. W. W.'s shot down seven men in the uniform of the United States army, deplorable, appalling as it is, may yet be the beginning of the end, for there can be no other end to the present condition than the extermination of such creatures as the apostles of violence and blood who fired the murderous shots. Those men in uniform and their kind had fought and suffered during the great war for the preservation of this government and the perpetuation of liberty. The reds and their ilk, taking advantage of that very liberty, seek to spread their hideous doctrines in this country and to a great extent have succeeded. The shooting of the former service men in the parade in Centralia may be the very thing needed to awaken the American people to the present ghastly danger to our institutions and our government. Those murdered men may have died in as good a cause as though they had given their lives on the bloody fields of France. At any rate, the poisonous snake that caused their death, I. W. W.-ism must be destroyed, and the sooner it is destroyed the quicker social and industrial conditions in this country will be restored to a reasonable degree of tranquility. THE REDS MUST BE SHOWN THIS IS NOT RUSSIA.

The man who keeps others at a respectful distance more often dominates those with whom he comes in contact. Too great familiarity breeds indifference, and often contempt.

The Bible (or some other book) tells us that "truth is mighty and shall prevail." But there would be an unholy uproar if the whole truth were suddenly let loose in this or any other community.

It's easy for a hardened sinner to put on a frock coat, a plug hat, a black tie, and pass muster in a crowd of respectable people. But the devil knows his own wherever they are found.

Light and reason guide the footsteps of people with brains. But without brains there is no light, and no reason, and the footsteps just mill around without beginning and without end.

"What is common sense?" inquires a would-be intellectual light. If he would acquire a little he would possess the answer to his own question.

An editor makes his living by writing stuff for others to think and talk about. But he values his life too much to make public his inmost thoughts.

The Good Old Thanksgiving Dinner

How shall the Thanksgiving menu be arranged? Conditions today are so different from those that prevailed at the first feast that it is not easy for us to follow exactly the plan of that pioneer dinner. In its main features, however, the dinner should pattern that first Thanksgiving.

What the goose and mince pie are to Christmas the turkey and pumpkin pie are to Thanksgiving. Other foods that deserve a place on the Thanksgiving dinner table are cranberries, oysters, potatoes, and Indian corn. Cranberries are natives of the country where Thanksgiving was first celebrated. They may be used as sauce, jelly or in pies, and are delicious and appetizing.

Indian corn meant much to the early settlers and should be included in the menu of today. It may be used in brown bread, baked Indian pudding or as succotash, corn pudding or served plain as a vegetable. Corn and pumpkins both furnish materials for decorations, yellow being the Thanksgiving color. The bright-colored pumpkin hollowed out and filled with fruits and garnished with autumn leaves makes an effective centerpiece.

Squash and onions are also favorite Thanksgiving vegetables and may well be added to the menu. The following is a suggestive Thanksgiving menu: Cream of Corn Soup, Popcorn garnish.

Olives.
Roast Turkey, Mashed Potatoes.
Boiled Onions. Celery.
Brown Bread. Butter. Cranberry Jelly
Pumpkin Pie. Coffee.
Nuts. Raisins.

Cream of Corn Soup

1 can corn.
2 cups cold water.
1 tablespoon chopped onion.
2 cups hot milk.
2 tablespoons butter.
2 tablespoons flour.
1½ teaspoons salt.
Pepper.

1. Chop corn and cook it with the onion and cold water slowly about one-half hour.

2. Make a white sauce of the remaining ingredients, add the corn and onion, strain and reheat.

3. Serve hot with fresh popcorn sprinkled over the top.

Cranberry Jelly

Pick over and wash one quart cranberries.

Add two cups boiling water and boil twenty minutes.

Rub through a sieve.

Add two cups sugar and boil five minutes.

Turn into glasses or small molds that have been wet with water.

Cranberries and Apples

Equal parts of cranberries and apples may be cooked together to make sauce.

(Thanksgiving recipes continued next week.)

Dividing Honors With Street Suits

The "all-day dress" appears to have come to stay, and is dividing honors with the tailored suit for street, traveling and business wear. It is defined by its name and is a garment for morning or afternoon wear, which made its appearance after the war began to curtail the supply of tailors, and a substitute for suits that could be made by dressmakers had to be promoted.

An example of a draped all-day dress is shown in the picture. It is made of brown in tricotine, with a fascinating cascade of folds formed by draping the material at the right side, and a long row of round covered buttons lending interest to the left side of the skirt. The very simple, surplice bodice is gathered in at the waistline and joined to the skirt with a piping of the goods. The dress opens at the right side and a long narrow sash of the material ties here, in the simplest of loops and the most casual manner. A piping at the neck opening would make a severe finish if it were not for flat silk braid, put on in points, that gives a pretty and original finish to the bodice, and appears on the sleeves from elbow to wrist.

It will be noticed that the hat worn with this dress is a strictly tailored affair of black hatters' plush, one of the many banded sailors that are business-like and popular for street wear. Grosgrain ribbon makes its very effective trimming.

Many an all-day dress was once a street suit. There are so many designs for making these one-piece frocks that they tempt the thrifty to remodel suits that are out of style, or show signs of wear, and give them a new lease on life. With the popularity of more fanciful styles remodeling becomes easier, and it is the fashion to be economical. With a world in need of clothes, every yard of wool or cotton goods should make itself useful in the wardrobe or be eliminated from it. Many people are in need of clothes for the coming winter, and many have more than they need. If you have a suit that has served its day with you, pass it along to some one who can remodel it into a good looking dress.

STATE BOARD ADVISES ON CONTROL OF FLU

The state board of health has issued a pamphlet discussing influenza and reviewing the efforts made to control the epidemic last year. The board issues the following general advice in case of a recurrence of the disease:

In the absence of exact information concerning the cause and mode of spread of influenza, the health officer is justified in putting into practice any measure that would be regarded by the majority of his community as reasonable and that he himself thinks advisable. He is not justified in putting into effect any measure that is not approved by his community or that would work a hardship, expense or great inconvenience to the people, unless such measure bears the stamp of approval of qualified experts in epidemiology and bacteriology.

The situation in influenza resolves itself into the carrying out of those measures that we know are applicable to all contagious diseases, plus such other measures as are made necessary by reason of the widespread character of the former epidemic.

Following are suggestions to health officers:

1. Enforce the prompt reporting of cases.
2. Enforce the immediate isolation of cases.
3. Close schools, unless adequate public health nursing or medical inspection services are available. Such a service is difficult to maintain during a severe epidemic of influenza, and therefore in most communities it will be advisable to close the schools.
4. Close unnecessary public gatherings, especially in small and rural communities, and see that all forms of social intercourse are restricted to the absolute minimum.
5. Enforce laws requiring sterilization of common drinking receptacles.
6. Enforce laws against expectoration in public places.
7. Health officers should give publicity to the fact that the burden of responsibility in the control of influenza rests, after all, chiefly upon the people themselves. The difficulty in

METHODIST CHURCH TO ENTER ZONE OF RUIN

A great Methodist church, erected and maintained by the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, will be erected amid the ruins of Ypres, in Belgium. This was stated by Dr. W. B. Beauchamp, director-general of the Centenary Commission, who, with Bishop James Atkins, the bishop in charge of European mission fields, just returned from Belgium.

The city of Ypres, terribly devastated, will not be rebuilt in its entirety. The once magnificent Cloth Hall, the finest in the world, the cathedral, the town hall, the churches, and other large ruins will be left as a perpetual memorial.

On these the city mayor has caused signs to be erected, reading: "This is holy ground. No stone of this fabric may be taken away. It is a heritage for all civilized peoples."

framing intelligent quarantine measures and the difficulties in diagnosis make it imperative that each citizen should be alive to his responsibilities to the rest of the community. People should remain at home whenever suffering from a cold, even though they have no suspicion that they may have influenza. The isolation of cases is undoubtedly of first importance.

8. The possibility of transfer of the virus of influenza through the medium of infected eating utensils and by contamination of the hands of attendants is coming to be more generally recognized. The families of patients in quarantine should be required to observe the usual regulations that are enforced in such diseases as scarlet fever and diphtheria, for the sterilization of eating utensils of the patient, the destruction by burning of all excretions from the throat, nose, etc.

A GREATER THANKSGIVING

The occurrence of both Armistice Day and Thanksgiving makes November a month of genuine gratitude. Into the time-honored and more or less perfunctory method of celebrating the latter, the former day instills a renewed spirit of thankfulness.

The year of which the Armistice Anniversary marks the close, has been one which, despite the unsettled conditions of business generally, was filled with boundless possibilities for a radiant future to the man who possessed the vision and forethought to look ahead.

You who have builded consistently this past twelve months need have no fear for the future. Success is now merely a matter of continuing the same policy.

Our Service not only strengthens the foundation; it is equally valuable in maintaining the soundness and integrity of the completed structure. CARRY ON!

SAN BRUNO TRUSTEES HAVE STORMY MEETING

The regular meeting of the city trustees Wednesday evening resolved itself into just one darn fight after another. A large number of San Bruno residents had gathered expecting some excitement, and they were not disappointed.

The first gun was fired at Mayor Louis Traeger, who was accused of grafting to the extent of fifty dollars. The mayor, saying laughingly that a man in his office was always being accused of something of the kind, explained the matter involved to the satisfaction of everybody present.

The next charge was against City Recorder J. M. Custer. J. Rockhill declared that Mr. Custer did not keep his books properly. Custer agreed to report at the next meeting just why he keeps his books on the system he is at present using.

Then a man from San Francisco arose and demanded why the city should assess him six dollars for burning rubbish on his vacant lots. This man stated that the roots were not dug up, whereas if he had done the work himself it would have cost him nothing and he would have removed the weed roots. The law governing removing weeds on city property was explained to him and he took his seat.

The resignation of City Marshal A. G. Meehan then came up for discussion and various charges were hurled at the officer, among others that while employed by the city as marshal at $125 a month with $5 additional as truant officer he was also in the employ of a San Francisco concern which paid him $100 a month. No definite action was taken by the board.

Then Mrs. G. Hawkins wished to know why when persons from San Francisco and other places came here to pay their taxes it often happened that City Clerk Miss Willits was not in to receive the money. Miss Willits promptly arose and engaged in a somewhat heated discussion with Mrs. Hawkins, informing her that she gave four hours of the day to collecting taxes, the remainder of the day to other city hall work. Mr. Rockhill then entered the discussion again, declaring that the city clerk's records were not kept as they should be and asking that they be locked up and an auditor secured to go over them.

The man from San Francisco then took the floor once more and stated that this was the first meeting of the San Bruno trustees he had attended and if he had known they were so much like a circus he would have made it a point to be present oftener and would have brought his wife along to enjoy the fun.

No action was taken on the charges against the city officials' books.

This ended the meeting, but not the evening's excitement. Before those present had left the hall James Forster, a young man of about 22 years, remarked to Marshal Meehan that things were run on a poor system in San Bruno and that there should be a "clean-up of the whole bunch." This aroused the officer to such an extent that he punched Forster in the jaw. Forster immediately complained to Mayor Traeger, and was informed that if he wished redress he should swear out a warrant for Meehan's arrest.

This was the end of an evening's

PLAN OLD MAIDS' CONVENTION.
